To Unitholders

Market Summary

Starting with the second half of 2019, global equity markets faced global economic slowdown, especially in manufacturing and export-import led sector. In addition to the slowdown, global trade was deteriorated from escalation of trade war between US and China, including hike of tariff in multiple phase deals. In contrast, global equity markets could end up positive from easing monetary policy effect, central banks all around the world cut interest rates and expanded its balance sheet. The inflection point of global economic recovery was triggered by Fed insurance cuts and de-escalation of trade war which relieve market pressure and increase investor confidence. The index continued its rally until the first quarter of 2020, global equity market faced with one of the highest volatility in stock market history. Coronavirus which was found in Wuhan, China, spread across the country and become a global pandemic. The number of infected people increased exponentially, causing governments to lock down countries. Many businesses hit hard, as a result, global economy went into technical recession. Global stock market sold off heavily, a decrease of 30-40% from previous high, in February and March 2020. At this time governments and central banks acted quickly by launching gigantic stimulus, cutting interest rate into zero and purchasing debt. Consequently, stock market could bottom out and rebound sharply in the second quarter of 2020. Moreover, in the third quarter of 2020, global equity price continued its rally from Fed easing policy commitment and leading economic indicator recovery.
